

I urge you not to adopt legislation that would lessen the effectiveness of Indiana's telephone privacy law. Before I had signed up, it was not uncommon for me to receive one to two phone calls every evening. Many of these calls come during the dinner hour and are an incredible inconvenience. Many times the callers will not take no for an answer and being rude in return is your only option. I find absolutely no benefit for the public for phone solicitations. Please reconsider and let the current legislation stand.

Sincerely,
Geraldyn Vonderhaar
